

FNRES Launches Real Estate Education Classes Online

Kerri Panchuk | 10.19.07

Fidelity National Real Estate Solutions (FNRES), a division of Fidelity National Financial, Inc., is allowing real estate professionals to continue their education online with its new Fidelity National University—an online educational outlet that can be accessed from any computer, 24-hours a day.

With classes offered in three separate divisions—sales, professional development, technology training and personal awareness—students can learn a variety of subjects online without leaving the comfort of their own home. The new educational portal is possible because of FNRES's unique partnership with Instructional Technology Services, Inc., a company that provides customized online training for clients.

“The greatest value of online education is allowing the working professional to deepen his or her skills and understanding with minimum impact on their schedules,” said Dr. Timothy Brannan, president of ITS. “Classes are available 24/7 and individual sessions can be whatever length of time suits the student. Because they can be accessed from any computer, classes are held at the hour and in the environment that a person finds most conducive to learning—whether that is the office, the home or wherever. Agents no longer have to drive to tech training sessions across town.”

http://www.dsnews.com/view_story.cfm?id=1669#